More tax revenue needed from AI data centres: Council

A discussion on increasing taxes on AI, data and cryptocurrency mining centres was had by Council at their first 2026 regular meeting on Monday.

Council will submit a resolution to the North Central Local Government Association to lobby the provincial government to allow data centres, which are heavy consumers of electricity, to be classified as Light Industry for municipal tax purposes.

Currently they are classified under "Business & Other".

Conservationists praise West Twin park addition

Northern conservationists are applauding the B.C. government for adding nearly 1,060 hectares of primary forest habitat to West Twin Provincial Park, northwest of McBride.

The new habitat protection is in the Inland Temperate Rainforest which is considered by scientists to be a biodiversity hotspot and includes areas identified as rare old growth.

Conservation North says that Interior old growth rainforests are used by a "full complement of large-bodied animals" such as Mountain Caribou and grizzly bear.

Although the area set aside is modest in size, Conservation North's director Michelle Connolly says, "We're glad that the BC government is protecting wildlife habitat in our region; this is the kind of leadership that the public wants to see more of."

Big audience for hockey drama

Move over, Schitt's Creek. U.S. entertainment media is declaring dark horse status for Canadian-produced series Heated Rivalry, a hockey drama that involves a romance between two star players.

Produced by Crave and launched in November, the series, which is available on HBO Max in the U.S., has drawn huge audiences, reportedly becoming Crave's most-watched original series to date and HBO Max's top debut for an acquired, non-animation title since 2019.

With just six episodes comprising the first season, the show has been renewed for a second season.

News of the Odd:

In 2006, a Tasmanian gold mine partially collapsed, killing one and trapping two other miners more than 900 metres underground. The miners survived by sheltering in a small steel transport cage. With limited food, no daylight, and unstable conditions around them, they waited for nearly two weeks as rescue crews worked through the rubble. Through a narrow borehole though, the miners discovered they could communicate to the surface.

Almost immediately they had a request: an iPod loaded with music, including their favourite artists, the Foo Fighters. When band leader Dave Grohl heard of this, he sent a handwritten note down the mine with a promise of concert tickets and beer. Two years after their rescue, the men were honoured at a Foo Fighters concert in Australia.

Feedback invited on hunting regs

The B.C. government is inviting input on its proposed updates to hunting and trapping regulations for 2026-28.

Approximately 60 proposals are being considered for the upcoming cycle, including changes related to limited-entry hunting and general open-season hunting.

Other proposals relate to harvesting methods, access management and how hunting and fishing regulations are delivered.

The Province reviews its hunting and trapping regulations every two years.

Finalized regulations will be published in the Hunting and Trapping Regulations Synopsis, which will be in effect from July 1, 2026, until June 30, 2028.

Council votes no change to travel budget

A proposal to revise the Council Travel budget was nixed by Council on Monday.

The proposal, presented by Councillor Wright, lowers each councillor's discretionary budget but would fund council members to attend specific conferences outside of their discretionary allotment.

A cost breakdown was not shown but council members implied that the change would result in an increase to the budget and they could not support it on that basis.

Councillor Wright said that other communities are increasing their council travel budgets and that Mackenzie will fall behind.

He says the current budget allotment results in councillors paying out of pocket for some travel and that Mackenzie is "doing a disservice"

'Data centres'...

The motion, presented by councillors Tapper and Wright, states that such facilities, in addition to high energy needs, have "unique demands on municipalities currently not being reflected in their tax rate" including community planning, emergency response, and lower levels of local employment relative to other industry.

Mayor Atkinson and Councillor Brumovsky advised that the District of Mackenzie is already in talks with the provincial government on the matter.

Mayor Atkinson added
that of several data centres
now in the province, IREN's facility in Mackenzie is the largest at 80
megawatts with, the mayor added, flexibility to go to 100 megawatts.

and investments in student learning and well-being."

Input from the community will be invited in coming weeks.
